Road Scholar Retreats Offer a Welcoming Getaway at Extraordinary Value

BOSTON (June 18, 2019) – Each year thousands of people travel around the U.S. seeking off-the-beaten-path locations, natural beauty and the best each region has to offer. Road Scholar, known for its learning adventures for Baby Boomers and beyond, offers Retreats in more than 40 idyllic locations across the country — with each featuring a setting with natural beauty, storied history and access to educational discovery, the heart of all Road Scholar adventures.

Whether it's the outdoors in Pennsylvania's Pocono Mountains, a sun-drenched arts training center near the Pacific Ocean or quintessential New England charm, opportunities abound around the U.S. to get away, unpack and learn about the area. Road Scholars embrace the outdoors every year when they set out to paddle waters, bike through rustic and urban paths, or hike storied trails and mountains. Beyond the great outdoors, they also venture indoors where literary studies, theater, yoga, and musical adventures among others take center stage.

Each Road Scholar retreat features:

- Expert-led educational opportunities
- Morning easy, optional exercise that unlocks your limbs and motivates your mind.
- Meeting with community members for insight into local life
- An authentic, farm-to-table meal
- Live performance or event
- Single rooms for only $100

“Our selection of Retreats combine learning and immersion in local history with local experts with comfortable accommodations as home base,” says JoAnn Bell, senior vice president of programs at Road Scholar. “Retreats provide an ideal setting for relaxing after energizing experiences in the classroom or outdoors and reflecting on a great day with new friends — all at extraordinary value.”
